General information

Stockholm University offers undergraduate and postgraduate education and research in four faculties:

- Humanities with a history-philosophy section and a section for languages
- Law
- Social Sciences
- Natural Sciences with sections for Mathematics and Physics, Chemistry, Biology, Earth Sciences

Undergraduate education

Courses and programmes

Undergraduate education consists of a number of courses in each faculty, and general study programmes. Programmes are either oriented towards a certain profession or are of a more general nature. Most programmes consist of several courses.

The length of a course is indicated by a system of points. One point corresponds to one week of full time study. A full academic year consists of 40 points. The level of courses is often indicated by the terms Basic, Intermediate, Advanced and Specialized Course, each level comprising 20 points. Courses usually range between 3 and 60 points. Study programmes vary in length between 30 and 200 points.

Tests and grades

Examination procedures vary between departments and courses. Most courses contain several tests. There are usually three grades, Fail, Pass and Pass with distinction. A transcript of record for a student only contains courses which he/she has passed.

Degrees

A degree, diploma or certificate is awarded to students who have either passed all courses within a study programme or completed courses outside programmes corresponding to the specific requirements for the degree/diploma/certificate in question.

From July 1st 1993, the following requirements apply for diplomas and degrees:

- A University Diploma requires at least 80 points
- A Degree of Bachelor of Arts/Social Science/Political Sciences/Science requires at least 120 points
- A Degree of Master of Arts/Social Science/Political Sciences/Science requires at least 160 points

For a Degree of Bachelor, the student must have completed courses of at least 60 points in his/her major subject, including a paper of 10 points. For a Degree of Master, the major subject must comprise at least 80 points, including a paper of 20 points or two papers of 10 points each.

The following degrees are awarded to students who have completed a programme oriented towards a profession:

- Degree of Master of Laws
- Degree of Master of Science in Psychology
- Degree of Bachelor of Science in Social Work

Postgraduate education

From July 1st 1993, the general requirements for admission to postgraduate studies are completed studies of 120 points (earlier 80 points). The student must also meet special requirements pertaining to his/her major subject. In most cases the student must have completed courses of at least 60 points in that subject. Sometimes there are also minor requirements for a subsidiary subject.

Studies for a doctor's degree comprise 160 points and ideally take four years. The student must complete graduate courses - usually 80 points - and write a dissertation which is defended at a public discussion.

Studies for a licentiate degree comprise 80 points, including a thesis of at least 40 points.
